Important Things to Know About Reading Labels:

Produce Labels:

- Organically grown fruits and vegetables have labels with 5 digits starting with the #9
- Conventionally grown fruits and vegetables have labels with 4 digits
- If the 5 digit code begins with the #8 it is Genetically Engineered (GMO)
- If the label contains more than 5 digits it is not part of the internationally standardized system.

Package Labels:

- Gum Additives: Always Avoid Gum Supplements and Diet Pills

All gum additives appear to exert a possibly powerful influence on the makeup of our gut bacteria. The full extent of this is not fully studied or understood, but another reason these common food ingredients should be treated as small additions to dishes and meals. They are inappropriate for use as supplements or sources of nutrition.

The GAPS & SCD Diets prohibit the use of xanthan gum, guar gum, or any gum additives for that matter due to the risk of inflaming the gut and the potential for gut flora disruption.

For all of the gums individually discussed below, it is wise to be exceptionally cautious using any for weight loss or other uses. In small amounts, as long as you are not sensitive, none appear of concern except for cellulose gum. But in larger amounts, they can cause bowel obstructions, negative changes to your gut microbiome, and other problems:

1. Carrageenan- absolutely avoid this gum-like additive. It is a suspected carcinogen and other diseases. Beware, it is often put in pet food!! Fortunately, some of the natural gums below are a much better option when used judiciously.
2. Xanthan Gum- used commonly in gluten-free flours. Be aware, this is a bacterial fermentation product, so the substrate used is of concern, usually GMO soy, GMO corn, wheat or dairy. This can be of big concern, especially to those with allergies (it can contain residual gluten from the wheat). Bob's Red Mill is one of a few transparent companies which guarantees the final product to be pure and free from gluten or any other contaminants. If you use xanthan gum, this is a good place to source it.
 - The main concern with xanthan is that some people experience gastrointestinal issues such as bloating and diarrhea after consuming it.

Those with gut imbalance issues and pervasive intestinal symptoms would be wise to limit exposure.

- Parents also need to make sure any foods they give to their babies do not contain it. Xanthan gum is clearly dangerous for infants. For example, the New York Times reported adverse events regarding infants who consumed the liquid gel thickener known as Simply Thick.
- 3. Guar Gum- this gum comes from a bean plant which is commonly found in India and Pakistan. Popular for its superior thickening power, it is a common ingredient in gluten-free foods, ice creams and coconut milk. Like with xanthan, there appears little reason to be concerned about guar gum, unless you are a sensitive individual. Guar can cause excessive gas and abdominal discomfort in some, with the risk increasing as the amount and frequency consumed increases.
- 4. Tara Gum- taken from a legume, minimal research/testing exists on this relatively new gum. Most of the animal studies up to date have been very promising and it shows great promise as one of the least offensive gums available.
- 5. Gellan Gum- used as an emulsifier and a stabilizer, this gum is processed from bacterial fermentation similar to xanthan gum.
- 6. (Locust Bean) Carob Gum- extracted from the seeds of the carob tree, this gum has a sweet taste similar to that of chocolate and is a common substitute for chocolate. It is tolerated much better than xanthan gum for infants.
- 7. Acacia Gum and Kudzu- both are fine in small amounts.

 Guar gum, tara gum, gellan gum, and locust bean (carob) gum are all safe in small amounts. Tara gum has a perfect safety record in the research so far, although these results are only in animal studies. Acacia and kudzu gum are also fine in small amounts.*

- The Best Sweeteners for Everyday Usage:

- A Great Article & Video on Sweeteners:

<https://www.thehealthyhomeeconomist.com/video-which-natural-sweeteners-are-best/>

 Please see the section below on Sweeteners for Specific Brands

1. Coconut Sugar (aka Palm Sugar, Coconut Palm Sugar, Coconut Syrup)- a great source of minerals, Vitamin C, B Vitamins and some amino acids. It is the single most sustainable sweetener in the world.
2. Date Syrup/Sugar- Next to raw honey, date syrup is my favorite sweetener as it is 100% fruit and loaded with minerals. Date syrup is fine to use in any type of dish, heated or not.
3. Maple Syrup- see article above for sources or the section below on Sweeteners. Best to buy organic as lead, RoundUp, PEG and other contaminants can be of concern in the harvesting and boiling down of maple syrup.
4. Raw Organic Honey- you need to know that beekeepers use pesticide sprays (to control mites which parasitize bees and can destroy the hive), antibiotics and even high fructose corn syrup as a supplemental feed for bees. The next best is local honey directly from a beekeeper in your area who uses no chemicals or other treatments, does not feed or move their bees, does not filter or heat their honey, uses wooden frames and natural wax foundation and has bee hives within 5 miles of your home. If you can't find all that aim for meeting at least some of these criteria.

5. Monk Fruit (lo han guo)- Monk fruit has a long history of use as a low calorie sweetener and within Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM). Modern monk fruit extract is 300 times sweeter than sugar with no calories. In addition, the glycemic index is zero making it suitable for diabetics. Monk fruit has a long history of safety for both adults and children. However, you must find water-extracted monk fruit as many companies use solvents and other harsh chemicals to separate out the mogrosides.
6. Stevia- Traditional stevia is green and unprocessed. The leaves are simply dried and ground. Be aware of liquid extracts as they contain fillers and other ingredients. Processed “stevia” products include Truvia, PureVia and others are to be avoided without exception. At up to 400 times the sweetness of sugar, these modern industrial amalgamations are “stevia in name only.” Be aware, many Stevia brands contain xylitol, erythritol, sugar alcohols, GMO ingredients like Dextrose, Glycerine and “natural flavors.” For those who follow traditional dietary principles such as Wise Traditions, Paleo, SCD and others, the unprocessed, low temp dried herb and quality extracts appear to have little to no risk if consumed on occasion and in moderation. SweetLeaf and Frontier are two trusted brands.
7. Yacon Syrup- made from yacon, a tuber in the daisy family native to South America. Very high in FOS which help nourish gut microbes, increase bowel transit time and encourage peristalsis.
8. Sucanat (also referred to as Sugarcane Jaggery)- if you are looking for the best and most nutritious form of cane sugar for your home, sucanat is it. It is the best alternative to “white” and “brown” sugar substituted 1:1 in all your recipes. Look for brands that say Certified Organic as many brands are mixed with GMO Beet Sugar.

Beverages/Raw Dairy: Lacto-fermented beverages such as kombucha (made with organic black tea) and kvass; herbal coffee substitutes; plain mineral water in glass bottles without added sweeteners. Coffee and Tea made from organic beans/herbs without fungicide sprays, mold tested, and organically grown. Milk/Dairy products should NEVER be eaten pasteurized/homogenized. Seltzers and other carbonated beverages should be limited and are not a replacement for clean, pure water.

COOKWARE/POTS/PANS:

- Stainless Steel: great for every day cooking except when cooking acidic food. You must know 2 very important identifying numbers:
 - 3 Digit Number- this number reflects the wide array of grades and types of stainless steel which reflect the quality, durability and temperature resistance of the steel.
 - 2 Digit Identifier (usually 18/10 or 10/0)- this number represents the composition of the steel with regard to the percentage of chromium and nickel.
 - *304 stainless steel is the same as 18/8. It is often called surgical stainless steel. It is also the minimum type one should purchase for cookware!

- Cuisinart- available in Marshalls, Homegoods, TJ Maxx and on the internet. Cuisinart pans have an aluminum core to improve heat conductivity. Since the aluminum does not touch the food, however, it is safe to use unlike some other brands such as All-Clad that blend the aluminum with stainless steel.
- iCook (Formerly Queen Cookware-Very Expensive)- https://www.amway.com/en_US/iCook™-19-Piece-Collection-p-120231
- Enamled Cast Iron- the downside to cooking with this type of cookware is how heavy it is. If you choose to cook with cast iron, be sure to use enamled. Furthermore, adult men and postmenopausal women (who are no longer bleeding cyclically) are at risk of the negative health effects of iron overload.
 - LeCreuset- available in many retail stores and online.
 - Staub- also available online.
- When Cooking With Acidic Foods (think Tomato sauce, lemon, etc.):
Important Notes:
 - Cooking acidic foods in stainless steel can leach toxic nickel and excessive amounts of chromium into your food.
 - For these types of acidic dishes it is best to use Clay or Stoneware (see below)
 - For an article about Clay vs. Stoneware and which is best for specific types of cooking- <https://www.thehealthyhomeeconomist.com/vitaclay-review/>
 - Vitaclay- <https://vitaclaychef.com/pages/why-vitaclay>
- Non-Stick Bakeware- I do NOT currently recommend any of the current brands of non-stick bakeware. Please be aware that any non-stick bakeware made with SILICONE or ALUMINUM IS TOXIC!!!! Avoid Greenpan and other non-stick pans touting safety and testing. Please see these articles for more information:
 - <https://www.thehealthyhomeeconomist.com/silicone-molds-baking-safety/>
 - <https://www.thehealthyhomeeconomist.com/greenpan-thermolon-cookware/>
 - Norpro- great cookie sheets, cake and pizza pans. Available online at <https://www.azurestandard.com/shop/product/household-family/kitchen/bakeware/baking-pans/baking-sheets/baking-sheet-stainless-steel-15-x-10-x-1-inch/6489?package=HA001>
 - Pyrex- loaf pans which are great for baking bread. Available online and in stores. <https://www.pyrexhome.com/product/1.5-quart-glass-loaf-pan>

Fats and Oils: Organic extra virgin olive oil; organic cold pressed macadamia, avocado, almond, high-oleic sunflower and high oleic safflower oils (in moderation); organic extra virgin coconut oil; unrefined organic palm oil; fat and lard from pigs allowed to graze; tallow and suet from grass-fed cows and sheep; poultry fat from pastured poultry; fatty wild-caught fish.

Examples: Be aware that independent tests at the University of California found that nearly 70% of all store-bought extra virgin olive oils in the US are probably fake!!! This study reported that the following brands failed to meet extra virgin olive oil standards: Bertolli, Carapelli, Colavita, Filippo Berio, Mazzola, Mezzetta, Newman's Own, Safeway, Star and even Whole Foods.

If you want to find the best olive oils, your best bet is to choose brands from the Weston A. Price Shopper's Guide. Also, the same University of California study found that the following brands met their standards for being true extra virgin olive oil: Corto Olive, California Olive Ranch, Kirkland Organic, Lucero (Ascolano), McEvoy Ranch Organic, Pompeian.

*Look for Olive Oils carrying the North American Olive Oil Association (NAOOA) seal and/or the USDA Quality Monitored Seal.

Grains/Legumes: All organic dried beans (except soy beans), lentils, whole grain rice, whole grains (except bulgur) and whole grain breakfast cereals that must be cooked; wildcrafted rice; organic popcorn (to pop at home); organic sprouting seeds (except alfalfa and soybeans-GMO). All grains should be soaked in an acidic medium or purchased SPROUTED to remove phytic acid and to minimize enzyme inhibitors and to improve digestibility and assimilation of nutrients. Ask the doctor for instructions if you do not have them. Avoid purchasing brown rice and cereals in open bins to avoid rancidity; purchase in sealed packages only. IF you purchase any item below which has NOT already been sprouted, you must soak them properly yourself. Please see us for directions on how to properly do this.

Nuts and Seeds: All nuts and seeds should be purchased raw and organic from sealed packages, NOT from open bins; organic almonds by mail order are best (as store-bought have been heat treated); soaked/sprouted organic or wild raw nuts, seeds and butters. All raw nuts should be soaked for 6-8 hours (or purchased SPROUTED) in salted water (Celtic Sea Salt) and then dried in a dehydrator or in an oven on warm setting. It is best to store nuts in the refrigerator in air-tight containers. The best choices below will have already been soaked/sprouted and should be RAW.
